COMMUNITY EFFORT—Everybody in and around the town of Bromhead, located in south-central Saskatchewan, had a hand some place in the construction of the Bromhead Memorial Bunk. Large crews of men worked long hours with no pay, and now can look upon a completed building something to be proud of. Pictures below show the various stages of construction:

TAKING SHAPE—After the rafters had been put up the roof was covered with sheets of plywood, a part of the work that went quickly.

NEARING COMPLETION—When the main structure was nearly closed in the men turned their attention to finishing work, adding the waiting room part of their bunk.

COMPLETED BUILDING—It contains a fully-stated sitting box and one sheet of firing box. The new building replaces a former structure built in 1927.

PRIME MINISTER ST. LAURENT places a wreath at the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier in Rome. The Canadian statesman made the Italian capital the fourth stopover of his world tour.

DO-IT-YOURSELF STYLE—Cold water poured over a bucketful of red-hot stones provides this Finnish with a homemade steam bath—Finnish style. The one pictured above was built in the heart of Paris by an enthusiastic amateur after he saw such baths while covering the 1952 Olympic Games in Finland.

BECKETT GALORE—Hitting the home for a no-game average of this point, Hec-catch, Verna Lanning is the pride of the girls at St. Mary's. High school Verna is the high-scoring forward on the school's feminine quintet.

WITH A HUFF AND A PUFF—Albert Wootton, last survivor of the Union Army of the American Civil War, made quick work of blowing out 107 candles on his birthday cake with one huffy puff. The old drummer boy is the last of 2,675,000 boys in line.

LOOK AT THESE HANDS—Rico Grande (right), Rio Grande college's fabulous basketball player, and Carl Englund, Brooklyn, Dodgers pitcher, compare hand sizes after France set a new one-on-one college scoring mark of 765 points in its game. Grande struck out 14 Yankee batters last fall in the third game of the World Series.

STRONG-BOX SAVED THOUSANDS IN BREAK-IN—Safe-crackers recently pried the door off the safe in the Alton, Manitoba, Co-op store and absconded with $19.00 in small change. Most of the change taken, however, had been stashed from three cash registers, while some $25.00 had been scattered on the floor around the safe. The thieves were apparently after larger loot contained in an inside compartment of the safe, but were unable to force the inside door. Store officials were reluctant to divulge the exact amount contained but stated it would run to several thousands in cash and cheques. Examining the rubble around it is Constable Mike Stewart, who started his duties as Alton's town constable that same morning.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Jamie Dowdall, of Chelsea, London, wears a "snoo-wrap" look as he gets a tip or two from racing motorists. Stirling Moss, Jamie was paying by the pump at a gas station when up drove Stirling and gave him some free advice on holding the steering wheel.
